

The British Science Festival is coming to Leicester...

...and we want to get you involved!

DMU is hosting an exciting day of interactive sessions on campus as part of the British Science Festival in Leicester this September. As part of an open-to-all community day, we are opening up some of our workshops and labs to people across Leicester. You and your friends and family can come along and experience what it like to be a scientist, interacting with the amazing facilities we have on the DMU Campus.

Workshops will range from LED interactive boards, laser cutting and 3D printing, finding out what we have in our TV, radio and audio facilities or seeing what we get up to in our health and life sciences labs.

The community day will be taking place on Saturday 17th September, from 9am – 12pm, and is open to members of the public of all ages, and free of charge, so bring the whole family. For more information about the different workshops on offer, simply fill out this booking form to join us on campus for a free, fun and interactive day out for the entire family. Please note places on each workshop are limited so sign up soon!

For more information about this community day, contact us at engage@dmu.ac.uk.

The British Science Festival is an annual festival hosted each year by a different city, and this year it is sponsored by De Montfort University. There will be a whole host of talks, workshops and drop-in events to get you excited about all things science, from looking into space, to the psychology behind how we choose our clothing, to taking a look at some of the most advanced technology in the world.

This year, there will be over 100 free events across the city from Tuesday 13th to Saturday 17th September for you to get involved with. For more information about the whole festival, please click here.

We look forward to seeing you in September!
